

ANFS 512 Food Connections (2 credits, P/F)

The course is designed to further develop the professional networking skills of students interested in food science and technology. ANFS 512 is fundamentally a seminar-style class featuring discussion of scientific and commercial information related to foods. The course was developed with Dr. Martin Lo in the food science program at the University of Maryland featuring shared presentations and discussion using interactive media (e.g., Adobe Connect) as a means to link our campuses. Outside speakers are linked as a third party so that both student and faculty groups can interact with speakers from various sites directly.